ALEXANDER TCHEREPNIN
(1899-1977)

Born in St. Petersburg, Russia, the son of composer Nikolai Tchernin (1873-1945). His early musical training was somewhat informal, but as his father was friends with the elite of Russian musicians who often filled his household, Alexander began composing at an early age. He attended the Petrograd Conservatory briefly but the Russian Civil War forced his family to move to Tbilisi where his father obtained a teaching job and Alexander studied composition with Thomas de Hartmann. The Tchernins left Russia for Paris in 1921 where Alexander studied piano with Isidor Philipp and composition with Paul Vidal. He then toured as a concert pianist and wandered among various countries before settling in Chicago where he taught at De Paul University and became an American citizen. He composed a vast amount of music in genres ranging from operas to solo instrumental pieces. His other major orchestral works include a cycle of 6 Piano Concertos. His 2 sons, Sergei (b. 1941) and Ivan (1943-1998), both became composers.

FRANCIS THORNE
(b. 1922)

Born in Bay Shore, New York. He was a student of Paul Hindemith at Yale University. After service in World War II, he pursued a career on Wall Street and then as a jazz pianist. He subsequently studied composition in Florence, Italy, with David Diamond, who encouraged him to incorporate his jazz sensitivities into his symphonic compositions. He spent much of his career championing the works of emerging composers, serving as director of the Walter W. Naumburg Foundation and the Thorne Music Foundation from 1965-1974, organizations that commissioned new works by young composers. He composed operas, operettas, orchestral, chamber, vocal and choral works. His Symphonies Nos. 2 (1964) and 4 (1977) have not been recorded.

ERNST TOCH (1887-1964)

*Born in Leopoldstadt, Vienna. As a child, he started playing the piano on his own and then was taught notation by a local violinist. He studied music at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt .am Main with Willy Rehberg for piano and Iwan Knorr for composition. By this time, he had already begun composing steadily and was appointed instructor of piano in Mannheim's Zuschneid's Hochschule für Musik. After service in World War I, he went to Berlin where he worked as a pianist, composer and teacher of composition. The rise of the Nazis forced his departure from Germany and he ended up in the United States where he gave lectures on Music in New York's New School for Social Research before moving on to Hollywood to score for the movies, where he settled and became an esteemed private teacher of composition. He composed operas, incidental music and film scores as well as orchestral, chamber, instrumental, vocal and choral works. His large output for orchestra included a Sinfonietta for String Orchestra, Op. 97(1964) and among his early works is an unpublished Chamber Symphony in F Major for Winds and Strings (1906).*
