ERIK BERGMAN
(1911-2006, FINLAND)

Born in Nykarleby. At Helsinki's Sibelius Academy, he studied musicology with Ilmari Krohn and musical literature with the critic and folklorist Yrjö Hirn. At the same time, he was a student of composition at the Helsinki Conservatory with Erik Furuholm and with Bengt Carlson at the Sibelius Academy. Afterwards, he had further composition training with Heinz Tiessen at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik as well as twelve-tone technique with Wladimir Vogel in Ascona, Switzerland. He taught composition at the Sibelius Academy, besides working as a choir conductor and music critic. He became one of Finland's leading modernist composers. An exceptionally prolific composer, his catalogue covers many different genres. His unrecorded concertant works include Piano Concerto, Op. 94 (1980-1), Cadenza for Oboe and Orchestra, Op. 137 (1996), Fantasia for Trumpet and Orchestra, Op. 150 (2003), The Maestro and his Orchestra for Violin and String Orchestra, Op. 136 (1996) and Dualis for Cello and Orchestra, Op. 86 (1978). CRISTER DANIELSSON
 (1942-1989, SWEDEN)

Born in Valdemarsvik, Östergötland County. As a teenager, he became a pupil of Magnus Björklund, solo trombonist of the Norrköping Symphony Orchestra and eventually joined the Band of the Swedish Navy. Afterwards, he began studying the theory of music and entered the State Academy of Music in Stockholm where his teachers were Bertil Jacobsson, Hans Eklund, Gunnar Johansson, Lars Sellergren and Sigfried Naumann for various disciplines. As a composer, however, he is virtually self-taught. While still a student, he became a trombonist with the Stockholm Philharmonic and later graduated as Director of Military Music and as a trombone teacher. He then taught the trombone at the State Academy of Music in Stockholm. Most of his compositions are for wind instruments in general and brass instruments in particular.
